Whatit is light on are recent policy changes, hot openings areas and good definitin of residency exeption, the onsite contractor opportunities and the educational/industrial partnership availabilities. It is heartwarming to know even in this harsh erra of trial by fire downsizing in the federal arena, there are still 38000 great jobs in NSA, 5100 PTO positions and 52000 in the Defense Investigative Service. So many openings in high end administrative, tech savvy, or secure positions with so few willing and able candidates obsessed with private industry. Too bad there entrance requirements for most mean you'd have to be a fresh college grad, PhD (at 57k and secure US resident) or not have a single mark on your police or financial record. Kinda tight requirements in national security regions these days. 6 of 6 people found the following review helpful. Good general overview

It was very useful for me to see all the agencies listed with their web sites, numbers and typical background/degrees of new hires. This allowed me to narrow my focus. The main weakness for me was not enough info on KSA's, fed resumes and actual interviews. I would recommend this book, but also suggest you pick up another to complement it... 5 of 10 people found the following review helpful. CORRECTION

MAKE A NOTE OF THIS, EVERYONE! This book has incorrectly listed the job hotline for the Environmental Protection Agency. They listed the number as #202.260.5055, but the correct listing is #202.418.4320. PLEASE pass the word. Thanks!

A reference for finding the ultimate federal job. Provides a complete databank of thousands of entry-level positions.
